Public Hearing: "Long Term Care in Pennsylvania"

Presented by

Heather Sedlacko

Board Member Pennsylvania Adult Day Services Association Chairlady Ward and Honorable Members of the Committee, thank you for the opportunity to speak with you today about the critical role of Adult Day Services (ADS) in long term care in Pennsylvania. My name is Heather Sedlacko. I am here today representing adult day centers around the Commonwealth in my role as a Board Member of the Pennsylvania Adult Day Services Association (PADSA). My daily work is that of Executive Director of Valley Care Association, a non-profit agency that has provided adult day services to residents of Beaver and Allegheny counties for nearly 30 years.

There may be people in this room today who have not heard of adult day services or those who think of ADS as a service that is "nice" but not critical to helping older adults, and individuals under age 60 with disabilities, to remain living in their homes and communities. My purpose in speaking to this committee is to emphasize how ADS is a family life-line for an individual who is teetering on the brink of nursing home placement.

Adult Day Services offers a center-based support system to elders and other adults under age 60 with disabilities who are not capable of full-time independent living to help them live at home. There are over 260 ADS centers in Pennsylvania serving approximately 11,300 Pennsylvanians. Daily supports include coordinated medical care, personal care (bathing assistance and incontinence care), nutrition, and therapeutic recreation. Some centers offer additional therapies, including physical, occupational, speech, music and art, podiatry, optometry, salon services by a beautician/barber and caregiver support. With this comprehensive service package, ADS is a true alternative to nursing home placement at 40% of the cost.

To make this point more concrete, here is a real life example of how Valley Care Adult Day Services, just a few miles from here, helped a local family. A man caring for his mother with dementia showed up at our adult day program for a tour without an appointment. As the site manager was showing him around, he broke down in tears and revealed that the stress of caring for his mother was tearing his marriage apart and he did not know where to turn. After some discussion and a lot of listening, the site manager was able to connect him with the local Area Agency on Aging, right there in her office, to begin the assessment process. Simultaneously, the adult day site manager began the paperwork for the mother to attend the program and faxed the required forms to the mother's physician. By the time the son left that afternoon, he had support and a plan for getting his mother help. He no longer felt alone. He was exceedingly grateful for the assistance and kindness of the staff in helping to provide a safe day time environment for his mother and later said that ADS saved his marriage and his sanity.

Every adult day program across the Commonwealth has many success stories to share. ADS centers work to keep people at home. As effective as current programs are, they could be even more effective in preventing more expensive premature nursing home placement if long-standing systemic and policy challenges could be alleviated. Today I will focus on three main areas of concern: (1) Online posting of inspection results; (2) Access to service during a crisis; and (3) Payment for services for middle and low income Pennsylvanians.

Online Posting of Inspection Results

PADSA supports high quality adult day services and the provision of accurate information to consumers and their families that will allow them to make the best decisions possible about their care. We do not feel that the current method being used to provide the public with information about individual adult day centers meets this goal. It concerns PADSA that inspection citations posted on the Department of Aging website uses language that includes entire sections of regulations, when only one portion may be related to a program's error. (See the addendum to this statement for a specific example.) This situation is not fair to the consumer who does not understand what he or she is looking at and it is not fair to the provider who appears to be riddled with mistakes when there was just one or two errors. It creates the image of excessive violations and is a strong deterrent for Pennsylvania's consumers to utilize adult day programs as critical and cost-effective supports to help people avoid placement in a nursing home.

(PADSA is also concerned about what appears to be a lack of uniform inspection enforcement across different regions of the state and the lack of any procedure to appeal a citation. Department of Aging Secretary Brian Duke has scheduled a meeting with us on October 20th to address these issues.)

Access to Service During a Crisis

It is no surprise that many people have not planned for long term care, but rather seek help when they find themselves in crisis. Currently, at the immediate moment it is determined that an individual no longer can live safely alone, they have few options. They are "entitled" to enter a nursing home, but they do not enjoy an immediate alternative choice to receive less expensive critical care services if they want to remain at home. Now, when government is seeking to more effectively manage spending on long term care, and 86% of older adults would prefer to remain living in their own homes, is the time to make a change.

Authorization for adult day services is based upon both clinical and financial need. Pennsylvania's long term care system must come to an agreement—both government and service providers—about how to manage the financial risk of accepting an individual's self-declaration of assets to allow initial services to begin while the details are being verified by the local County Assistance Office. Until that is done, individuals in crisis will continue to be placed initially in more expensive nursing homes for at least thirty days, where statistics demonstrate they are likely to remain.

Pennsylvania has experimented with streamlining eligibility to provide individuals with immediate home and community based care in a crisis. Community Choice was piloted in 2003 and produced great success with quick access to services for the most needy (often within 24 hours) with very little erroneous self-reporting of assets. However, we still do not have a uniform and quick way statewide to give people access to home and community based services at the moment they need them, thereby forcing individuals into the most expensive long term care – nursing homes.

Payment for Services for Middle and Low Income Pennsylvanians

Consumers pay for adult day services in a variety of ways. For middle and low income seniors there are two sources of government assisted funding: Medical Assistance (using both federal and state monies); and, PA Lottery dollars fund a similar program known as Options. We appreciate the support ADS providers received from the Office of Long Term Living and the Departments of Aging and Public Welfare with the introduction of "enhanced" MA waiver services in 2010. This action gave many ADS programs the boost in rate reimbursement they needed to make it financially feasible to offer the comprehensive service package I previously described.

The lottery funded Options program serves middle and low income older adults and contains a cost-sharing formula so that for many consumers government is not subsidizing care at 100% -- an important point during these very difficult economic times.

As a reading of the history of the PA Lottery verifies, the intent of lottery funds was to help keep Pennsylvania's older adults at home with community based services, but the Options program has not seen an increase in 10 years, despite the fact that over $100 million of lottery funds are routinely held as an un-appropriated reserve each year. At present, a typical participant in the Options program is allocated just over $700 per month for all of his or her community based service needs. That is not enough to provide the ongoing preventive and maintenance supports needed to allow an individual to avoid nursing home placement.

With sufficient lottery funds appropriated to the Options program, ADS can provide the critical chronic care services for individuals to remain in their homes and community at 40% of the cost of nursing homes.

In conclusion, PADSA believes firmly that a range of services should be available to Pennsylvania's older adults and adults under 60 with disabilities to allow them the opportunity to choose where they spend their days. There is an appropriate place for all the providers in the continuum of long term care, from senior centers to skilled nursing homes. Within this continuum, Adult Day Services is a vital lifeline connecting a person who is losing his or her independence to their community. We already have this role for some individuals, but with government's help to reduce some of the existing barriers, adult day services can provide cost effective critical chronic care for the well-being of consumers, their families, and Pennsylvania's budget.

This addendum was printed directly from the PA Department of Aging online database of Licensing Inspection Summaries available to consumers. This example demonstrates PADSA's concern that an entire regulation is listed, implying multiple infractions instead of only the specific ones (see pages three (3) and six (6) following for details).

Promoting Quality Adult Day Services in Pennsylvania

Pennsylvania Adult Day Services Centers

Who We Arel M

We are 260+ Adult Day Service centers across PA licensed to serve 11,300 PA consumers and family caregivers.

Adult Day Service centers are licensed community-based programs for adults with functional disabilities, cognitive impairment, and/or medical frailty who may require continuous assistance and /or supervision.

Adult Day Service centers keep elders and adults with disabilities at home and in their communities by providing nursing oversight, health and safety monitoring, personal care and personal hygiene, nutritious meals which meet dietary needs, medication administration and management, therapeutic activities, and a social – peer group that helps to prevent depression.

Adult Day Service centers provide peace of mind and reduce stress for family caregivers. We are a reliable source of support which restores balance in times of family crisis and enhances the quality of life for both consumers and their family care givers. Almost 50% of those attending Adult Day Centers suffer with Alzheimer/Dementia. Caregiver stress from caring for a loved one with Dementia is the number one reason for nursing home placement.

Adult Day Services Centers are a Low Cost Alternative to Nursing Homes
